

COMPARISON OF GRANT OPPORTUNITIES: NATIVE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT BODIES VS ALL OTHERS

On average, Native American government bodies have access to less Federal Grant funding than State and Local governments in the United States. This largely stems from Food, Health, and Social Services ($371,670,350), but also from Community Development and Arts ($75,000,000). Here we see the grants available to Native American Government bodies (colored), with size as the dollar amount.

Federal Food, Health and Social Services and Environmental Sustainability and Natural Resources grants provide the largest amount through the most grants to Native American Government bodies.
